The British Government feels that it is up to the United States Government to take the initiative in arranging the tripartite talks on Albania which it is agreed will be held by the US, UK, and France. The British Government believes it highly desirable to set a date as soon as possible, the date preferably to be shortly after the new year. The British believe that the initial conferences will be of an exploratory nature and would result in reference to the three Governments of the tentative positions set forth at the meeting.
